Name of Public Authority: TELECOMMUNICATION COMMISSION

Introduction:
The Public Access to Information Act of 2010 not only gives the public the statutory right to information about how its government works, but also affirms an obligation on Government to provide information as requested. In an effort to be as transparent as possible in its operations, the Broadcasting Commission issues this statement to provide insight into its operations, services, and obligations to the public. The information provided includes operating procedures, documents that govern the way the Broadcasting Commission makes decisions, as well as some broad and general information about what the Broadcasting Commission does on a day-to-day basis.

Please note that any private business or individual's trade secrets or other information provided to the Department in strict confidence will not be available to the public.
