Introduction:
The Public Access to Information Act of 2010 not only gives the public the statutory right to information about how its government works, but also affirms an obligation on Government to provide information as requested. In an effort to be as transparent as possible in its operations, the Department of Energy issues this statement to provide insight into its operations, services, and obligations to the public. The information provided includes operating procedures, documents that govern the way the Department makes decisions, as well as some broad and general information about what the Department does on a day-to-day basis.
Please note that personnel records and Energy Conservation/Energy Limbo Contest participants' personal information will not be available, nor will be any private business or individual's trade secrets, or other information provided to the Department in strict confidence.
