The Ministry of Health recognizes that Bermuda, like many countries, is experiencing a growth in its elderly population and has high rates of chronic non-communicable diseases. With an ageing population, high rates of chronic diseases, and a residential care system at capacity, the Ministry understands that there is a need to improve the robustness of the long term care system. To accomplish this, there was a need to first gain a better understanding of the current state of the system.

This report sought to document government funding of the long-term care system, explore mechanisms that the government might employ to stimulate private sector investment in residential care, investigate seniors’ needs for home conversions and their ability to pay for such conversions, and to make recommendations on methods of improving the efficiency of the long-term care system.

The report explores the residential long-term care system and expands the scope to include long-term services and supports (LTSS) which includes residential care but also takes in other services that support seniors and persons with disabilities either in their own home or in care facilities.

  + Home modifications incentives to enable ageing in place (e.g. home equity release, public funding)
  + Financing incentives for residential care development (e.g. Premier/Minister of Finance committed to up to $10 million in Government guarantees to support care home development).
- Develop a 3-5 year strategic plan for long-term care that addresses data needs, funding, governance, capacity and quality.
